

Aurora Johnson
Semester Research Analyst

Aurora Johnson is a Semester Research Analyst at Georgetown's Center for Security and Emerging Technology (CSET), where she works on the CyberAI Project. She is earning her M.A. in Georgetown's Security Studies Program, where she concentrates in technology and national security and is a National Science Foundation CyberCorps Fellow. She has experience working in the public sector, doing Open Source analysis for the LAPD, as well as in academia, researching issues at the nexus of emerging technology and national security. She holds a B.S. from Georgetown University in Science, Technology, and International Affairs.